Anand scares challenger Carlsen before settling down for draw in third round of World Championship

PTI ■ CHENNAI

Defending champion Viswanathan Anand on Tuesday gave his Norwegian challenger Magnus Carlsen a scare despite playing two black pieces even though the third game of the World Chess Championship draw ended in a long grinding draw here.

The third game turned out to be a hard-fought affair lasting 51 moves after a rather sedate start that had seen the first two games ending in draws without any real excitement.

Midway into the third game, Anand again had seized the initiative with some spots of manoeuvres, but world number one Carlsen saved the situation with his counter play.

Later at the post-game conference, Carlsen conceded that he felt "scary" though he averted the danger.

"I was worse, and then I probably made it more worse. I missed some simple things in the middle game and I had enough play and it was not a disaster but it was scary," Carlsen said.

After the third draw on the first, the deadlock continues with none of the two rivals refusing to blink so far, but what happened at the Hyatt today was probably a clear indication that a rough battle is now shaping up.

The scores stand at 1.5 points for both players and the five-time champion Anand will have the advantage of playing with white pieces in the fourth game tomorrow.

Carlsen showed his intentions of a bloody battle when, contrary to the popular belief, repeated the Reti opening.

"I was expecting that Carlsen would jump from one opening to another," said

Grandmaster R B Ramch, who is a part of the five commentaries team here.

As is typical of the Reti opening, the changes to several set ups is possible. Carlsen went for a position akin to the English opening that was more of a Sicilian Dragon with colours reversed.

The middle game took a major turn when Carlsen diverted his attention to the King side by a queen sacrifice but Anand was alert enough to see his counter play.

As the game progressed, Carlsen got back in his grove and got his counter play in form of a thematic central break through. Thereafter, the Norwegian was pretty much at ease as the game quickly changed shape once again.

Anand knew there was sufficient play for both sides when he allowed the Indian to a position that had bishops of opposite colors.

“Obviously for black what he is getting is the two bishops, if I can role my queen side pawn down I would be better,” Anand noted in the post-game chat.

Anand won a pawn in the small tactical battle that ensued but it was not enough, Carlsen was quick to launch some three... and the Indian decided to go for further liquidation by trading the last pair of rooks on the 37th move.

Carlsen accepted the exchange offer and won the pawn with his next few precise moves and after that it was a completely drawn position on the board.

However, the players continued the battle almost till the last nail. It was just the two bishops remaining on board when the players signed the truce after 51 moves.

In the fourth game on Wednesday, Anand will get his second white in the 1.2 game match that has Rs 14 crore as the prize fund. If a were tennis, it's advantage Anand for now.

Djokovic has the final laugh

World No.2 beats Nadal to clinch to close 2013 season

AP ■ LONDON

Novak Djokovic kisses his ATP trophy. AP

Having produced one of the most memorable comebacks in tennis, Nadal lost in a deciding match for the second time at the four finals and missed the chance to join Andre Agassi as the only players to have won all four Grand Slams, Olympic gold, the Davis Cup and the year-end tournament.

"It's not going to change my career, winning or losing today," Nadal said. "I am not very disappointed. I know that I was not favored for the match, even if I tried with the right attitude, in my opinion, fighting for every moment, trying to be positive in every moment, even if the match was not going the way that I would like."

Monday's defeat was a strong warning to Nadal, who overhauled Djokovic for the No. 1 ranking last month, that his Serbian rival will be ready to climb his form into next year's Australian Open, where he is the three-time defending champion.
