US Defence secy makes first visit to NATO with allies

US Defence Secretary Pete Hegseth on Wednesday made the first trip to NATO by a member of the new Trump administration, as the allies wait to learn how much military and financial support Washington intends to provide to Ukraine's government. Hegseth held talks with UK Defence Secretary John Healey before a meeting of the Ukraine Defence Contact Group at NATO headquarters in Brussels. Hegseth's predecessor, former Defence Secretary Lloyd Austin, set up the forum for drumming up arms and ammunition for Ukraine in 2022. Over nearly three years, more than 50 countries have collectively provided Ukraine with more than USD 126 billion in weapons and military assistance. But the meeting this week was convened by another country for the first time: the United Kingdom. At previous gatherings of the forum were chaired by the United States. No decision has been made on who might chair the next meeting. If one is elected, Hegseth was not expected to make any announcement on new weapons for Ukraine. His trip comes less than two weeks before the 75th anniversary of Russia's full-scale invasion of Ukraine on February 24, 2022. Most US allies fear that Russian President Vladimir Putin would stop at Ukraine's border if he wins, and that Europe's biggest land war in decades poses an existential threat to their security. US President Donald Trump has promised to quickly end the war. He's complained that it's costing American taxpayers too much money. He has suggested that Ukraine should pay for US support with access to its rare earth minerals, energy and other resources. Some US allies worry that a hasty deal might be clinched on terms that are favourable to Ukraine. On top of that, Trump appears to believe that European countries should take responsibility for Ukraine's security going for...
